John E. McGowan's Review of the Situation.

A Well-Known Democrat Talks of Cleveland's Chances.

Sixty Thousand Majority Predicted in This City.

John E. McGowan, whose proudest boast is that he is a Democrat, has been for many years in public life. He has been connected with the city police courts as clerk for several years, and his knowledge of the politics of this city, the State and the nation is equal to that of any man. He is not a particularly sanguine man, and therefore his views, based on experience, observation and sound judgment, are of especial value.

An Evenino World reporter sought an expression of Mr. McGowan's views upon the present political situation, and, from a Democratic standpoint, they are particularly

"What do you think are the probabilities for Nov. 6?" was the query propounded by the man of notes.

"I am confident that Grover Cleveland will carry this city by at least 60,000 plurality, and, of course, the State, which will settle the National contest.

'I argue that the wonderful increase in the first day's registry of voters in this city, indicating, if it indicates anything, a vote of at least 260,000, also indicates a heavy ncrease of the Democratic vote. Heretofore he Democrats have had a walkover in this city. Now there are several tickets in the field. Every candidate has a host of friends, and each friend and admirer is bound to make his man win That accounts for the increased interest indicated by the increased registry.

"And if the Democrats gain no more than their share by this increase it will swell the majority to the figures I have named.

"Free Trade, the bugaboo flourished by the Republicaus, is frightening no one. The closing of those sugar refineries by a Trust fostered by our immense protection and surpus producing tariff, ought to and will make many Democratic votes. y Democratic votes. The Republicans in the Senate are trying their best to be only a little less Democratic than the Democrats, and that is disgusting those thick and thin high Protectionists, so that they are losing both ways.

"It is so in this State. Between the two stools—free whiskey and high license—the Republicans will lie prostrate when the votes are counted.

"I say the plurality will be 60,000 in this city. It may be more. It will be fully that if there is no deal between Democrats and Republicans, and I do not think there will

What of Hill?" "What of Hill?"

"Hill's election is as sure as that the sun gives light. His position as the champion of the working people has made every worker his friend. His explanation of his veto of the Saxton Electoral bill should convince every fair-minded man that he was sound. His stand as the defender of New York City and Brooklyn against the attempts of the hayseeds from up in the country to give us high license and tuck away the money obtained from it into their own pockets should make every New Yorker love him. He is a home-ruler for New York City. Yes, sir; the whole ticket will win in this Yes, sir; the whole ticket will win in this election, for we are right. We have offered the right men to the people, and the people are right in the belief that it would be foolish to discard old servants whom they have tried and know to be able, faithful and honest for new ones, even if the new ones do come to them with first-rate letters of recommenda-

Cleveland has given us an honest admin-"Cleveland has given us an honest administration, and the country is prosperous, Harrison may be a good man, but we know that Cleveland is.

"Hill has been a first-class Governor, conscientious and honest. Miller's a teacher of teelotalism and a practiser of other things. Hill will also succeed himself."

"What of the triangular or quadrangular fight in this city?"

ngnt in this city?"

"Now, see here. I have said that if the Democrats of this town all pull true we will carry the city for Cleveland, Hill and tariff reform. Who will be Mayor, Sheriff or Coroner is a matter upon which I do not care to express myself. Let Democrats vote silently on these points, 'Say nothing and saw wood.'"

DRAMATIC NEWS AND TALK.

CURRENT AFFAIRS THAT INTEREST THE MANAGERS AND PLAYERS.

Daly's Plans Include a New Melo dramatic Venture - John Gilbert and "The Rivals"-Rev. Mr. Colley's Mishap Results in the Retirement of a Strong Member of the "Fascination"

Augustin Daly has now settled down to work at his home theatre, and, as predicted some time ago in THE EVENING WORLD, is going quite extensively into outside attractions. It is already known that his melodrama, which will be of the "Flash of Lightning" and "Under the Gaslight" order, opens Nov. 12 at Niblo's Garden The scenic artists are now at work upon this production, which is to show New York life in its various phases, and an overturned railroad train. The train will remain at Niblo's for four weeks, and then go through the country. Mr. Daly, however, since he has been away, has, it is said, written another play, upon which he will stake a great deal. He has engaged Terriss and Miss Milward for this country next season, to fill twenty-six weeks time with this work. He may, however, before that time give the piece a trial in the English Provinces, though it will not be seen in London until Terriss and Miss Milward have played through the United States, when the piece will go to England under his direction. There is every possibility that Terriss and Miss Milward will open their American tour in New York City. Daly's new play, it is said, is a melodrama. (Everything, by the bye, is a matter of "it is said" in connection with America's exclusive manager. Mr. Daly is now arranging a tour for his company. It will extend as far west as San Francisco and include Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and, in all probability, St. Paul and Minneapolis. Road managers have a new and formidable competitor. road train. The train will remain at Niblo's

John Gilbert, who has been added to the cast of "The Rivals," which is to be produced by Joseph Jefferson at the Fifth Aveenue Theatre Oct. 29, and in which Mrs. Drew will also play has been alling for some time. It is thought, however, that he will be in good acting condition by the time that he is called upon to appear.

Joseph Haworth, that virile young actor, seems to be in demand. Since he left "Philip Herne" he has been offered the road part in "The Bells of Haslemere" and the leading part in "Paul Kauvar," which opens its season, under Henry Clay Miner's management, at the Grand Opera-House, Nov. 12.

Ariel N. Barney's latest acquisition is Miss Mary Shaw, whom he has engaged to support Miss Julia Marlowe. Miss Shaw was formerly a member of Daly's company, and later appeared with Mme. Modjeska. Mr. Barney has a large number of the Modjeska people with him. This is probably owing to the fact that his co-operator, Fred Stinson, was Modjeska's manager for several years. was Modjeska's manager for several years, Miss Estelle Clayton, who substitutes "A Sad coquette" for "The Quick, or the Dead" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre Thursday night, is to star the country. William McConnell is now engaged in facilitating this. In fact, she has engaged him as facilitator.

A tragico-pathetic occurrence took place two or three days ago at the Fourteenth Street Theatre. In the cast of "Fascination" the big mastiff that welcomes Madge as she makes her appearance in a boat will be remembered. The mastiff was trained to make a rush for the Rev. Mr. Colley's coattail as that gentleman left the stage. The dog, however, has sadly overacted his part. The other night he not only secured the reverend gentleman's coat-tail but some of his flesh. He has been placed on the retired list—the dog, not Mr. Colley. The fiftieth performance of "Fascination" will occur next Tuesday. The run has been remarkably successful. Mr. Rosenquest is so pleased that that he has booked the play for the opening attraction of the Fourteenth Street Theatre next season.

Miss Helen Barry, it is positively announced, will open her American tour under J. M. Hill's management at Hartford, Conn., Nov. 26. She will be supported by Milnes Levick. The dates have been made to permit of her opening at the Union Square Theatre in December, says the same autherity.

Jack Sanford is to manage Miss Lavina Shannon's tour. He has entered upon the spirit of his work with wonderful rapidity, for he says: ''At the 'Star début' tendered her by Government ladies of the country in Washington, last June, Miss Shannon made an artistic triumph in the rôle of Lady Audley."

"Great Scott!" That is the name of a farcical comedy in which Miss Della Shirley is to appear. Her repertoire will include "Viola." a comedy drama; "A Ragged Hero." a humanly interesting drama; "Hunks," a comedy drama and "An Untangled Mystery." a comedy drama, with "thrilling climaxes."

The sale of seats for Tony Pastor's opening night will begin Oct. 15. The new theatre will be opened Oct. 22 with Tony and com-pany as attractions.

Here is the complete cast of "Mr. Barnes of New York," which will be produced tonight at the Broadway Theatre: F.F. Mackay,
E. H. Vanderfelt, J. H. Gilmore, Ralph
Delmore, F. Riman, Miss Emily Rigi, Miss
Isabella Evesson, Miss Effic Germon, Miss
Frankie Kemble, Miss Helen Carlotte, R. B.

Arlington Hall and Ruppinger's Gay with Bridat Rejoleings

The marriage of Miss Annie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Fry, of 41 Canal street, and Mr. Lion Pearl took place in Arlington Hall last evening.

Rabbi Dr. Wasserman officiated, the cere mony being performed shortly before 6 o'clock. The bride was attired in a beautiful dress of white surah silk, with princess train, a V-shaped corsage, and wore a bridal veil fastened in her hair with diamonds.

The maids of honor were Misses Ruby Pearl and Jessie Radelheim. Alfred Rolland, Samuel Cahen and George Rosensteil were the ushers. Prof. Seelig and his orchestra played Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

After the ceremony the bride and groom led the march to the supper-room, which was beautifully festooned for the occasion. Dancing followed the supper.

She is working in a State street store—
I think she handles braid—
And her wide acquaintance brings to her
A rushing West-Side trade.
She was always at her counter, and
No quarrels would she pick,
But she's not the airl she used to be
Before the carmen strick.

Beloved was she where'er she went, For her smiles were frequent, and There was something charming in her eye And warm in her soft hand. But she's pale to-lay, and I'm afraid She's liable to sicken, For she's not the girl she used to be Before these strikes were stricken.

I think it cuts her to the quick
In a wagon for to ride;
I think the climbing in and out
Is galling to her pride.
I'm certain that a week of this
Her heart would surely break,
For she's not the girl she used to be
Before the carmen strake.

Edward frequently looked at Louise to see if she evinced any alarm, but the brave girl did not, and, though he really was uneasy, he strove to conceal it.

But Hickey said something which he knew to be true, although he would not have said it himself, which seemed to startle Louise, for she turned slightly pale when she heard it, but still made no remark.

"Why does it blow so hard when there are no clouds, Mr. Hickey?" asked Henry.

"It's a nor'wester: they're always clear when it's going to blow hard," was the reply.

"We'll not feel it when we get in under the land," said Edward cheerfully.

"No, sir," said Hickey, "not when we get there. But, sir, I reckon we'll have to reef the mainsail and have the bonnet off the jib before long. The wind increases every hour. I wish she wasn't so heavily sparred."

"What she can't carry she must drag!" said Edward sternly. "She stands up very well, I'm sure!"

"Yes, sir, but our rigging is new and

"You had better go below with the boys, dear Louise; you are drenched with spray on deck here."
"I would rather stay where you are. Edward," she replied. "There is something sublime in this scene; the great waves, foan-capped, and angre; the brave little vessel dashing through and over them. I am not afraid."

He said no more, but with a steady hand kept the vessel to the wind, luffing when the wind in an instant Edward, so as to have as little train as posse ble on the spars.

On struggled the little vessel against sea and gale, but she seemed to make searcely any headway now, not but what she was stand and will built, but both were too much for her.

Suddenly, after a heavier gust than usual, and when a heavy sea struck her, a sharp crack was heard forward, then one aft, and in an instant Edward knew what was the matter.

"Down for your lives—down below!" he shouled, pushing Louise and the two boys into the cabin and drawing the hatch over them.

"The axes! Quick, Hickey! and stand by to cut away-the masts are sprung."

The later words were hardly spoken when.
